Diberting History
OF
John Gilpin

John Gilpin was a citizen
Of credit and renown,
A trainband captain eke was he
Of famous London town.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

John Gilpin's spouse said to her
dear,
"Though wedded we have been
These twice ten tedious years, yet we
No holiday have seen.

Tomorrow is our wedding day,
And we will then repair
Unto the Bell at Edmonton,
All in a chaise and pair.

OF JOHN GILPIN

My sister, and my sister's child,
Myself, and children three,
Will fill the chaise, so you must ride
On horseback after we."

He soon replied, "I do admire
Of womankind but one,
And you are she, my dearest
dear,
Therefore it shall be done.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

I am a linendraper bold,
As all the world doth know,
And my good friend the calender
Will lend his horse to go."

Quoth Mrs. Gilpin, "That's well said;
And for that wine is dear,
We will be furnished with our own,
Which is both bright and clear."

OF JOHN GILPIN

John Gilpin kissed his loving wife,
O'erjoyed was he to find,
That though on pleasure she was bent,
She had a frugal mind.

The morning came, the chaise was brought,
But yet was not allowed
To drive up to the door, lest all
Should say that she was proud.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

So three doors off the chaise was stayed,

Where they did all get in ;
Six precious souls, and all agog
To dash through thick and thin.

Smack went the whip, round
went the wheels,

Were never folk so glad ;
The stones did rattle underneath
As if Cheapside were mad.

John Gilpin at his horse's side
Seized fast the flowing mane,
And up he got, in haste to ride,
But soon came down again;

For saddle-tree scarce reached had he,
His journey to begin,
When, turning round his head,
 he saw
Three customers come in.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

So down he came ; for loss of time,
Although it grieved him sore,
Yet loss of pence, full well he knew,
Would trouble him much more.

'Twas long before the customers
Were suited to their mind,
When Betty screaming came down stairs,—
“The wine is left behind!”

OF JOHN GILPIN

“Good lack!” quoth he, “yet
bring it me,
My leathern belt likewise,
In which I bear my trusty sword
When I do exercise.”

Now Mrs. Gilpin, careful soul,
Had two stone bottles found,
To hold the liquor that she loved,
And keep it safe and sound.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

Each bottle had a curling ear,
Through which the belt he drew,
And hung a bottle on each side,
To make his balance true.

Then over all, that he might be Equipped from top to toe,
His long red cloak, well brushed and neat,
He manfully did throw.

OF JOHN GILPIN

Now see him mounted once
again,
Upon his nimble steed,
Full slowly pacing o'er the stones
With caution and good heed.

But finding soon a smoother road
Beneath his well-shod feet,
The snorting beast began to trot,
Which galled him in his seat.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

So “Fair and softly” John he cried,

But John he cried in vain;
That trot became a gallop soon,
In spite of curb and rein.

So stooping down, as needs he must
Who cannot sit upright,
He grasped the mane with both
his hands,
And eke with all his might.

OF JOHN GILPIN

His horse, who never in that sort
Had handled been before,
What thing upon his back had got
Did wonder more and more.

Away went Gilpin, neck or nought;
Away went hat and wig;
He little dreamed when he set out
Of running such a rig.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

The wind did blow, the cloak did fly,
Like streamer long and gay,
Till, loop and button failing both,
At last it flew away.

Then might all people well discern,
The bottles he had slung;
A bottle swinging at each side,
As hath been said or sung.

OF JOHN GILPIN

The dogs did bark, the children
screamed,
Up flew the windows all,
And every soul cried out "Well done!"
As loud as he could bawl.

Away went Gilpin—who but he?
His fame soon spread around;
"He carries weight, he rides a race!
'Tis for a thousand pound!"

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

And still, as fast as he drew near,
'Twas wonderful to view,
How in a trice the turnpike men
Their gates wide open threw.

And now, as he went bowing down
His reeking head full low,
The bottles twain behind his back
Were shattered at a blow.

OF JOHN GILPIN

Down ran the wine into the road,
Most piteous to be seen,
Which made his horse's flanks
to smoke,
As they had basted been.

But still he seemed to carry weight,
With leathern girdle braced;
For all might see the bottle necks
Still dangling at his waist.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

Thus all through merry Islington

These gambols he did play,
Until he came unto the Wash
Of Edmonton so gay ;

And there he threw the Wash
about,
On both sides of the way,
Just like unto a trundling mop,
Or a wild goose at play.

OF JOHN GILPIN

At Edmonton his loving wife
From the balcony spied
Her tender husband, wondering much
To see how he did ride.

“Stop, stop, John Gilpin! Here’s the house!”
They all at once did cry;
“The dinner waits and we are tired.”
Said Gilpin, “So am I!”

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

But yet his horse was not a whit
Inclined to tarry there ;
For why? his owner had a house
Full ten miles off, at Ware.

So like an arrow swift he flew,
Shot by an archer strong ;
So did he fly—which brings me to
The middle of my song.

OF JOHN GILPIN

Away went Gilpin, out of breath,
And sore against his will,
Till, at his friend the calender's,
His horse at last stood still.

The calender, amazed to see
His neighbour in such trim,
Laid down his pipe, flew to the gate,
And thus accosted him:

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

“What news? what news? your tidings tell;
Tell me you must and shall;
Say why bareheaded you are come,
Or why you come at all?”

Now Gilpin had a pleasant wit,
And loved a timely joke;
And thus unto the calender,
In merry guise, he spoke:

OF JOHN GILPIN

“I came because your horse would come ;
And, if I well forebode,
My hat and wig will soon be here:—
They are upon the road.”

The calender, right glad to find
His friend in merry pin,
Returned him not a single word,
But to the house went in;

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

Whence straight he came with hat and wig;
A wig that flowed behind,
A hat not much the worse for wear,
Each comely in its kind.

He held them up and in his turn
Thus showed his ready wit:
“My head is twice as big as yours,
They therefore needs must fit.

OF JOHN GILPIN

But let me scrape the dirt away
That hangs upon your face;
And stop and eat, for well you may
Be in a hungry case."

Said John, "It is my wedding
day,
And all the world would stare,
If wife should dine at Edmonton
And I should dine at Ware."

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

So turning to his horse he said,
“I am in haste to dine;
'Twas for your pleasure you came here,
You shall go back for mine.”

Ah! luckless speech and bootless boast,
For which he paid full dear;
For while he spake, a braying ass
Did sing most loud and clear;

OF JOHN GILPIN

Whereat his horse did snort, as he
Had heard a lion roar,
And galloped off with all his might,
As he had done before.

Away went Gilpin, and away
Went Gilpin's hat and wig:
He lost them sooner than at first;
For why? — they were too big.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

Now mistress Gilpin, when she saw

Her husband posting down
Into the country far away,
She pulled out half-a-crown;

And thus unto the youth she said,
That drove them to the Bell,
“This shall be yours when you bring back
My husband safe and well.”

OF JOHN GILPIN

The youth did ride, and soon did meet

John coming back amain ;
Whom in a trice he tried to stop
By catching at his rein ;

But not performing what he meant
And gladly would have done,
The frightened steed he frightened more,
And made him faster run.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY

Away went Gilpin, and away
Went postboy at his heels,
The postboy's horse right glad to miss
The lumbering of the wheels.

Six gentlemen upon the road,
Thus seeing Gilpin fly,
With postboy scampering in the rear,
They raised the hue and cry; —
40

OF JOHN GILPIN

“Stop thief! stop thief! a highwayman!”

Not one of them was mute;
And all and each that passed that way
Did join in the pursuit.

And now the turnpike gates again
Flew open in short space;
The toll-men thinking as before,
That Gilpin rode a race.

JOHN GILPIN

And so he did, and won it too,
For he got first to town;
Nor stopped till where he had got up
He did again get down.

Now let us sing long live the King,
And Gilpin, long live he;
And when he next doth ride abroad
May I be there to see!

ADDITIONAL VERSES AND NOTES

The story of John Gilpin's ride was related to Cowper by his friend, Lady Austen, who had heard it as a child. It caused the poet a sleepless night, as he was kept awake by laughter at it. During these restless hours he turned it into the famous ballad. It appeared in the "Public Advertiser," November 14, 1782, anonymously.

A celebrated actor named Henderson took it for one of his public recitations at Freemasons' Hall. It became immediately so popular that it was printed everywhere, — in newspapers, magazines, and separately. It was even sung as a common ballad in the streets. It has preserved its popularity to the present day.

The original John Gilpin was, it is said, a Mr. Beyer, a linen-draper, who lived at the Cheapside corner of Paternoster Row. He died in 1791, at the age of nearly a hundred years.

The following matter appears in Moore's Book of Ballads, published by Bell and Daldy, 186, Fleet Street, and 6, York Street, Covent Garden, London.

[“ In Hone’s ‘ Table Book,’ ii, 79, the following stanzas are stated to have been found, in the handwriting of Cowper, among the papers of Mrs. Unwin. In the opinion of Mr. Hone’s correspondent, they evidently formed part of an intended episode to the Diverting History of John Gilpin. They are not given in any edition of the poet’s works.”]

Then Mrs. Gilpin sweetly said
Unto her children three “ I’ll clamber o’er this style so high
And you climb after me,”

But having climbed unto the top
She could no further go,
But sate, to every passer by
A spectacle and show :
